Football rivalry. Real-world action.

THE BRIEF

Use football identity, local relevance and prizes to encourage supporters to join a coastal clean-up challenge.

MY CONTRIBUTION

I led the paid-social workstream for the North East Nurdle Derby, covering creative variants, A/B test setup, targeting, budget tracking and performance reporting. I ran Meta campaigns alongside GA4 to review campaign traffic and website activity, and reviewed onboarding data with the team to identify friction in the participation journey. My remit connected campaign delivery with platform traction: giving supporters a reason to visit, making participation clear and understanding where interest lost momentum.

CHANNEL ROLES

Facebook: local community and sharing. Instagram: visual storytelling and participation. X: football conversation and reactive rivalry. LinkedIn: campaign and partner credibility.

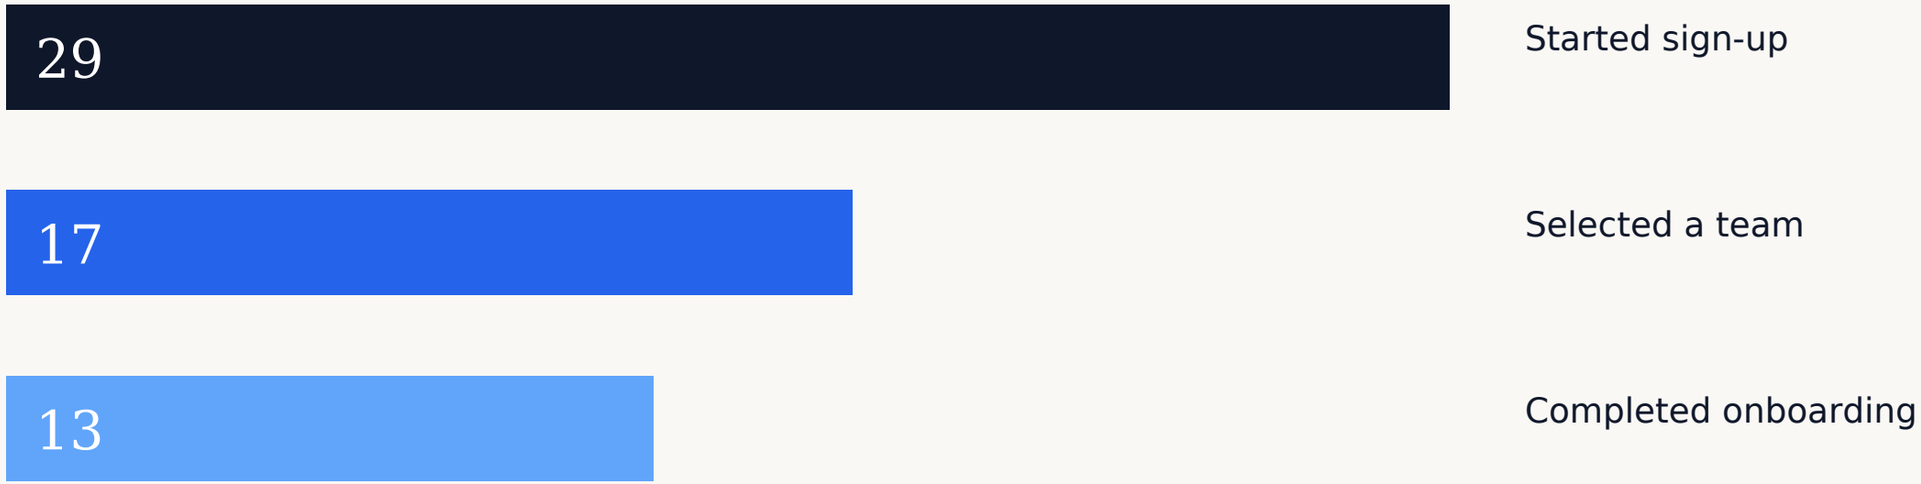

CREATIVE BRIEF

Proposed 20-30 second master video, with short cut-downs and reusable scoreboard, matchday and fan-content families.

Meta, GA4 and the onboarding journey

I ran Meta alongside GA4 to review campaign traffic and website activity, and reviewed onboarding data with the team to identify friction in the participation journey.

The participation counts below are from the team snapshot dated 15 September 2026.

READING THE JOURNEY

17 of 29 sign-up starts reached team selection (58.6%). 13 of 17 reached completed onboarding (76.5%). These stage ratios are calculated from the dated team snapshot.

The October landing-page-view records are shown separately from this September snapshot.

My campaign decisions

- Set £3 per variant per day for the 17-20 September hook test before committing more budget.
- Removed London and Harrow to focus the Round 3 audience on North East England.
- Kept engagement and link-click activity against their own objectives, using Meta alongside GA4 to review website traffic.
- Paused the higher-CPC traffic variant after £140.55 spend.
